

Abstract of the Disclosure

The invention provides a technique for transmitting radio programming over a cellular transmission network. In some embodiments, the technique provides a system for making radio programming available in a digital form over a processor based network. The radio programming is then accessed by a cellular transmission system and broadcast to cellular receivers.